Francisco Chronicle. Hot Weather Philosophy.

New Yorkers ought to be more thankfu than they usually are for the climate - which they live. Even the somewhat torric heat of the present kind of summer weather is no without its advantages, and when the en-forced city residents let everything go, as it were, like a yacht in a squall, and pant and perspire, hat in hand, and with "vest apart to catch Heaven's blessed breeze," after th manner of Hood's "Eugene Aram," philosophy will still make life worth living. For do but consider what happens to the unfortunate who live in what is called an equable climate where one can bask in the sameness of the imperature every day for nine months is the year, and only a light umbrella is needed the other three months. Is it not notoriou that the residents in such countries never amount to anything; that they gradually lose all their energies, just as the bees oceamaking honey under like circumstance that not being compelled to "rustle," they be come indolent, unambitious, lotes eaters, in word. ## An Open Confidence.

Our summer trade has so largely exceeded our expectations, and our light weights are so closely sold out, that we begin to open our stock of ness August 1, 1887: medium heavy styles for early autumn with a cleaner residue than we ever had; and that, too, without a "clearing sale," "slaughter sale," or any similar hoary-headed device which has grown gray with use. Of course we want to sell whatever in summer goods we have left—not so much to to the self "make room for Fall goods" as to turn our merchandise into cash and get whatever profit Capital stock paid in there is in the sale. But, so large has been the legitimate increase in our business that each person sees us start out with a fresh stock, fresh fabrics, and above all, fresh vim and life.

AN EASTERN TALE.

A king once summoned his three sons, And thus addressed the anxious ones:
"Go forth, my sons, through all the earth And search for articles of worth; Then he who brings the choicest thing

Shall in my stead be crowned as king, Twas hard to choose between the two In one year's time again they meet, And kneel before the sovereign's feet. The monarch knew not what to do And as with gracious outstretched hand, The third is standing calmly there He welcomed home the youthful band, Now, with a half triumphant air He natural eagerness expressed, To see the objects of their quest. And smile of confidence and hope

He shows a cake of Ivory Soap, The first such lustrous pearls displays, So peerless in its purity.

That every tongue is loud in praise. That dirt, alarmed, takes wings to fly So white, the snow-flakes on their way Compared to them are dull and gray. Grasps it, and cries in wild delight The next a diamond more pure, No more confusion or dismay, And larger than the Koh-i-noor. No more cold meals on washing day That shone with such a brilliant light, Subjects' my youngest surr obey The sunbeams, shamed, withdrew from The Ivory Soap has won the day.

A WORD OF WARNING

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory':" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.
